

Editorial

An overview nursing and midwifery

Marie Eve S. Gibson*

Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, Canada.

Accepted 17 May, 2021

EDITORIAL NOTE

African Journal of Nursing and Midwifery ISSN 2756-3332 is a peer-review, open access journal that provides a access for the publication of similar research articles in all formats of nursing and midwifery, specially new trends and advances. The journal tells for systematic and scholarly articles, critical reviews, short communications, and case report that will raise debate on research, policy, theory or philosophy of nursing and midwifery.

High profiles manuscripts dealing with nursing practice, women's health, nursing education, patient care, nursing informatics and management, are encouraged. Highest is given to critical scholarly debate on topic that have strategic significance for educators, practitioners, leaders and policy-makers.

African Journal of Nursing and Midwifery intends to prove the understanding of nursing and midwifery practice in Africa and the world, both as a profession and as an academic discipline. In this sense, our mission is to publish excellent scholarly articles encompassing all aspects of nursing and midwifery, and we invite researchers and scientists in the area to support the outcome of their scholarship to the journal. The specification of the journal include the following:

To publish the highest quality scholarly contributions reflecting the diversity of nursing and midwifery. In this sense, we will publish work that demonstrates the use of various and follow the methodology as well as highlight the theoretical underpinnings of nursing and midwifery.

To publish articles deals with planning, production, management, and governance of the health workforce, with health care delivery and health outcomes, particularly as having link to nursing and midwifery.

To publish articles conclude with psychiatric and mental health nursing. Because clinical research is the primary vehicle for the development of nursing science, the journal presents data-based articles on nursing care provision to clients of all ages in a variety of community and institutional qualifications. Future, the journal publishes theoretical papers and manuscripts addressing mental health promotion, public policy concerns, and educational preparation of mental health nurses.

To publish original articles on current research, issues, practices and innovations in addictions nursing, as well as the delivery of care in nursing and midwifery.

To publish new research and current knowledge across a broad range of clinical and interdisciplinary title including maternity care, gynecology, primary care for women and newborns, public health, health care policy, and global health. With an aim on evidence-based practice, the journal is given for improving the health care of women throughout their lifespan and promoting excellence in midwifery.

Scope of the Journal

To encourage debate, both theoretical and practical, on a broad range of titles that present a variety of cross-disciplinary interests. The journal is interested in attracting submissions that exhibit new things, qualitative and quantitative research methods and approaches particularly research that collaborate high-level learning and teaching, which is fresh, exciting, analytical, critical, controversial, applying new thoughts.

To encourage authors to write clearly, logically and systematically so that content is accessible to a whole range readership, particularly those individuals who may not be same with the subject matter under discussion.

To publish all-method manuscripts on a wide-network of topics that include clinical, psychosocial, biological, health services, and health systems research studies. The journal also welcomes short research reports, clinical and/or concept papers, current issues, editorials, and commentaries that are of special interest to nursing and midwifery.

My Journal of "African journal of Nursing and Midwifery" has a completed volumes and issues for the latest year. This Journal having some key-words like: Genetic nursing, Gynaecology, Perioperative nursing.

*Corresponding author. Marie Eve S. Gibson, E-mail: Sophie.gibsonston-hsc@gmail.com.