EDITORIAL NOTE

The International Journal of Medical Sociology and Anthropology is an open access, peer-reviewed international journal that invites original research articles and reviews on the most recent advancements and discoveries in life sciences, preclinical and clinical medicine, and sociology fields. The journal's ISSN is 2756-3820. Journals prosper by providing the most comprehensive source of discovery and accurate details on findings in all areas of the field, as well as recent breakthroughs, in the form of original papers, analysis, articles, case reports, brief messages, and other formats, all of which are freely available online to researchers all over the world, with no restrictions or subscriptions.

All published papers in this journal, as well as all published articles, are permanently archived in Academic Resource Index, WorldCat, AcademicKeys, Index Copernicus, J-Gate Portal, Citefactor, and abstract. All published articles are given a Digital Object Identifier (DOI).

IJMSA is especially interested in publications that detail significant advancements in medical research, disease treatment, and patient quality of life. Manuscripts describing how medical science has altered healthcare, extending and improving the quality of life for millions, are invited in this regard. Also articles that study the manner in which culture and society are organised around or influenced by concerns of health, health care, and related topics from multidimensional and ecological perspectives. The journal welcomes significant research articles that provide a sociological analysis of medical organisations and institutions; knowledge production and method selection, healthcare professional actions and interactions, social or cultural as well as clinical or bodily effects of medical practise, and so on. Sociology of epistemology, knowledge science and technology studies, social epistemology, frequently working at the intersections of public health, qualitative patient experiences, and social work.

Authors can use the online tracking system to submit papers and track their progress toward publication. As every report that is to be made public must be submitted within 45 days of receipt. Various processes, such as quality control, peer review, and paper preparation, take between 4 and 5 weeks to complete. The performance reviews and peer reviews take 14 days to complete, and the submission deadline is only seven days after the reviewers and editors accept.

Volume 11 and Issue 1 of the IJMSA will be released. Peer review is a system for evaluating a manuscript's quality before it is published. Qualified scholars in the appropriate study area evaluate submitted manuscripts for originality, validity, and significance to assist editors in deciding whether or not to publish the manuscript.

Without subscription fees or registration hurdles, all articles published by this journal are made freely and permanently accessible online shortly after publication. Additionally, writers of articles published in this journal are the copyright proprietors of their articles and have allowed any third party the right to use, reproduce, or disseminate their articles in advance and in perpetuity.

I'd like to thank all of the writers, reviewers, and other supporter groups for their contributions to the final editing of the published articles, as well as the editorial assistant's help in resolving IJMSA concerns in a timely manner. I owe them a debt of gratitude for motivating me to appreciate the work and progress of other organisations that contribute to the successful publication of articles.
